DUCCHIO RELIEF FOR ART MUSEUM

Marble Work, Once Pronounced a Forgery, Now Declared Genuine.

PIETA, BY MAJANO, ALSO ACQUIRED

Chinese Sculptures of Sixth and Seventh Centuries Added to Oriental Art Collections.

Many important acquisitions of recent date were announced yesterday by Edward Robinson, director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art. The most noteworthy were two additions to the renaissance sculpture of the museum—a terracotta group of Benedetto da Majano, representing the Pieta, and a marble relief, formerly in the Aynard Collection, by Agostino di Duccio.

The relief aroused interest in Duccio when it was exhibited in Paris in 1877. It puzzled the critics. In 1906 and 1907 it was again the object of serious controversy, the work being pronounced a forgery. In the Museum Bulletin, out to-day, Dr. Wilhelm R. Valentiner, curator of decorative arts of the museum, asserts that it has been accepted by some of the best connoisseurs of Renaissance sculpture as a characteristic work of Duccio.

Another addition to the museum's collections was a Florentine cassone, dating from about 1475, the panel of which is by one of the minor Florentine masters, but which in proportion, design and color is said to be the finest type of this kind of furniture.

Mr. Robinson placed particular emphasis on the efforts of the museum to build up its collections of Oriental art as far as the means at hand would permit.

Recent additions to its Oriental collections include two Chinese sculptures. One is a large stone statue representing Kouan Kin, which the Museum Bulletin describes as being "one of the sensations of the Exposition des Arts de l'Asie in the Museum Cernuschi in Paris last year. It is one of the few statues which came from the Longmen caves, from a group of sculptures which is one of the most important in the development of Chinese art.

The other Chinese sculpture purchased by the museum is the head of Bodhisattva. Both were executed at the end of the Northern Wei Dynasty and the beginning of the Tang Dynasty, the dates running from 465 to 525.

Announcement was made of the presentation to the museum by Mrs. Adrian H. Joline of a collection of Japanese sword guards, eighty-three in number.

A gift of Japanese and Chinese paintings, which belonged to the late Charles Stewart Smith, has been given to the museum by his heirs, Mrs. Charles Stewart Smith, Charles S. Smith, Jr., and Howard C. Smith. There are seventy pieces. They will be exhibited in the fall.

The portrait of the late George A. Hearn by Irving R. Wiles was hung yesterday in the gallery containing many of the Hearn bequests. Recent additions of painting of the American school bought out of the Hearn fund include "In the Connecticut Hills," by Ben Foster; "Mayfair," by Clifford Beal; "Silver Clouds, Arizona," by Albert L. Groll. The number of William Blake's works in the museum has been increased by the acquisition of two water color drawings. In sculpture a bronze group, "Centaur and Nymph," by Paul Manship, is shown in the Gallery of Recent Acquisitions.

PARK CONCERT SEASON ON First of Season on Mall To Be Heard Sunday.

Concerts on the Mall in Central Park Saturday and Sunday afternoons was the plan advocated yesterday by the volunteer committee which Park Commissioner Ward named recently to take up the matter of park concerts. Sunday's concert will be the first of the season, and will be by an orchestra. It has not been announced whether military bands will also play on the Mall again. They were banished by Charles B. Stover when he became commissioner. Neither was there any announcement as to the possibility of seven concerts a week for the season on the Mall, as was carried out by Mr. Stover.

There will be another meeting of the committee to-morrow. Among those who were at yesterday's conference were Frank Damrosch, R. E. Johnston, Richard Stahlberg (representing Victor Herbert), E. G. Clarke, (representing John Philip Sousa), and Naham Franko.

MAE A. SULLIVAN IN VAUDEVILLE

Wilton Lackaye in a New Sketch at the Palace—Bills for the Week.

Mae A. Sullivan, the young lady who has been so unsuccessful in keeping her name out of the daily papers, arranged with some optimistic booking agent to appear at the tag end of the bill at Hammerstein's Victoria Theatre yesterday. At about 4:30 Mr. Loney Haskell, who lately acted as interpreter for "Don the Talking Dog," entertained the audience with an exuberantly humorous introductory speech, and Mae A. Sullivan appeared.

She seemed to be exactly like any other frightened young lady, and began upon a carefully prepared speech which came out rather haltingly. Then she sang "By the Beautiful Sea," and Mr. Hammerstein's regular sailor chorus came out on the stage and sang much louder than Miss Sullivan. According to her little speech she "desires to be a credit to the stage." The applause at the conclusion of the act was most encouraging.

Bickel and Watson are a bright spot on the programme this week with their exhibition of skill on various musical instruments, and George White dances, which is the only thing he does well. The Adamsons (Akoust and De Beryl), are still demonstrating "The Temptation of Adam and Eve," and John P. Conroy is another feature with his diving girls. Among the balance of the attractions is the Charles Abner troupe of cyclists.

WILTON LACKAYE returned to vaudeville at the Palace Theatre yesterday in a sketch by Hall McAllister, "Quits." When Mr. Lackaye made his first brief excursion into the two-day, a few years ago, he used "Quits" as his vehicle, but as presented yesterday at the Palace the sketch has been rewritten into a tabloid drama, with lots of action. "Quits" tells the story of a wife with a past, which is condoned by her husband upon her plea that she was a victim of evil circumstances. He brings home a guest to dinner who, it develops, had been a lover of his wife's. When the husband leaves the room she pleads with the visitor to keep her secret and not expose her. She fails to do so, and when the husband returns he is told of his wife's true character and record. The husband still believes in her, when the friend proposes that they have a furious battle, in which the husband is to feign death at the end. The wife comes in and, seeing her husband prone on the floor, exults over his liberty and the fact that she can send the old lover to the gallows. The dénouement comes when the husband jumps to his feet and the woman realizes that she has been tricked. Mr. Lackaye was at his best as the old admirer. His companion, a clown, Emmett Kim, Ruth Bates and Joseph Culligan. Others on the Palace bill were Roshanara, the exponent of Far Eastern dances; Harry Cooper, in songs and comedy; Elizabeth Murray, in dialect songs and comedy; Ralph Riggs and Katherine Witche, in modern dances; Adler and Arline, Woods and Woods Trio, and Mercedes, who enters upon his third consecutive week at the Palace in his telepathic transference of thought and mind.

"THE BRIDE SHOP," B. A. Rolfe's production, is at the New Brighton Theatre this week. This offering was written by Fred De Gresac. Andrew Tombs and Lola Wentworth are the stars of the company, and they are assisted by a good cast. Homer Lind presented his new playlet, "The Singing Teacher," by Delavan Howland and himself. "The Singing Teacher" is a one-act drama and exposes the fraudulent methods of the men who pose as singing teachers and ruin thousands of voices in order to make money. Mr. Conchas presented his new intermezzo, "Achilles and Patroclus," in which he juggles heavy cannon balls as easily as dexterously as so many marbles. The Turkish pianist, was applauded for his playing on the piano. Mae Melville and Robert Higgins are appearing in their newest comedy skit, "Breaking Into Society." De Haven, Nice and De Haven offered their singing and dancing specialties. Webb and Burns appear in their humorous characterizations of two Italians. Sid Baxter, assisted by Miss Beatrix Southwick, presented his novel offering.

Votes Crusade in Theatre.
Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse, Mrs. Charles Whitman, Miss Alice Carpenter, Mrs. John Winters Brannan, Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch, Mrs. Henry Wise Miller, Miss Anna Constable and Mrs. Henry Butterworth, of the Women's Political League, of 25 West 45th st., will address the audience at the Cort Theatre at the end of the second performance of the photo-drama, "The Escape," to-morrow afternoon. These suffragists will hold several outdoor meetings during the afternoon, finishing their labors at the Cort Theatre, where they will arrive at 5:45 o'clock.

HE AND FAIRBANKS FEATURES OF SHOW

Ascribes Failure of Famous Community Chiefly to Ignorance of Human Nature.

New Harmony, Ind., June 8.—Former President Taft was the principal speaker here to-day at exercises which marked the climax of the centennial celebration of the founding of this town. It was "Robert Owen Day," and fitting tribute was paid to the man who originated one of the most discussed experiments in the history of socialism.

Mr. Taft's address was in the nature of a requiem for socialism. He said the community experiment here failed, as all socialism must fail, because it found no substitute for the motive to human effort furnished by private property. He said the plan was based on the assumption that man was a different being from what he is.
